Hurricane Season
by Nicole Melleby

Book Talk
Fig, a sixth grader, loves her dad and the home they share in a beachside town. She does not love the long months of hurricane season. Her father, a once-renowned piano player, sometimes goes looking for the music in the middle of a storm. Hurricane months bring unpredictable good and bad days. More than anything, Fig wants to see the world through her father’s eyes, so she takes an art class to experience life as an artist does. Then Fig’s dad shows up at school, confused and looking for her. Not only does the class not bring Fig closer to understanding him, it brings social services to their door. As the walls start to fall around her, Fig is sure it’s up to her alone to solve her father’s problems and protect her family’s privacy. But with the help of her best friend, a cute girl at the library, and a surprisingly kind new neighbor, Fig learns she isn’t as alone as she once thought . . . and begins to compose her own definition of family.

Praise for Hurricane Season
“Fig Arnold is an original and irresistible heroine in a story full of hope, art, and love.”
—R. J. Palacio, author of Wonder

“Melleby’s debut offers a tender, earnest portrait of a daughter searching for constancy while negotiating her father’s sickness and the social challenges of tween girlhood, including her first crush on a girl.”
—Publishers Weekly, starred review

“Fig’s story will engage middle grade readers who enjoy thoughtful novels that address complex topics. It may even inspire them to seek out the works of van Gogh.”
—School Library Journal, starred review
1. Each chapter of the novel is named after a different Vincent van Gogh painting. What connections do you see between paired paintings and chapters?

2. “[Fig] wanted to let them think her dad was weird. It was much better than thinking he was crazy.” (p. 20) What is the difference between weird and crazy? How do Fig’s neighbors, teachers, and classmates perceive her dad? What don’t they see in him that Fig wishes they knew?

3. Fig studies the painter Vincent van Gogh because she thinks understanding him will finally help her understand her father, who is a different kind of artist – a musician and a composer. What other similarities do you see between van Gogh and Fig’s dad? What differences?

4. New neighbor, Mark, befriends Fig’s dad and begins spending more time with them. What does Fig think of mark at first? How does his presence change Fig’s family? How does her opinion about Mark change throughout the novel?

5. Fig believes she can care for her dad on her own without anyone else’s help. Why does Fig feel like she has to manage their situation on her own? What is her reaction when other characters try to help her? Why is it sometimes difficult to ask for and accept help from others?

6. How does Fig’s dad react when she tells him about her first crush, on a girl at the local library? How does Fig react when her dad tells her about his own new romance?

7. Fig and her dad have a very close relationship. Do they communicate well with each other? How does Fig’s dad explain to her what he’s going through? Does Fig feel like his explanations are enough?

8. Fig feels frustrated and hurt when the adults in her life don’t talk to her about the important things going on in their lives, such as her dad’s new relationship and information about her dad’s diagnosis. Why does Fig feel so betrayed? Why does she lash out? We forget she’s eleven because she has to act much older. Fig handles a lot for her age, but she is still eleven – how do you react when she lashes out against her dad?

9. Art is a recurring theme and appears in different forms throughout the novel – from Vincent van Gogh’s paintings to Fig’s dad’s music to Fig’s art project. What do you think each of these works of art says about its creator?

10. Part One of the book begins with a quote from one of Vincent van Gogh’s letters to his brother Theo: “The beginning is perhaps more difficult than anything else, but keep heart, it will turn out all right.” How do you feel this quote reflects the novel? What do you think comes next for Fig and her family?
